Study literature in Paris, a city viewed as the writing capital of the Western world through much of the twentieth century, as part of a short term study abroad program, December 26, 2014–January 9, 2015.

Paris has inspired countless writers, who were captivated by the city’s physical beauty, its deep sense of history, and its exciting social life embodied in its restaurants and cafés. Read the works of world-famous writers, such as Victor Hugo, Honore de Balzac, Gustave Flaubert, Emile Zola, and stroll the streets of the city that inspired some of their greatest works.
