

Interior Design—in Paris & Berlin

Faculty Led

Dec. 27, 2023 — Jan. 10, 2024

This faculty-led program will focus on comparing and contrasting more classical architectural styles in Paris, such as at Versailles, with modern architectural styles in Berlin, with a special focus on the Bauhaus movement in the early 20th century.

Time in Berlin will include a day-trip to Dessau, home of the School of Design, currently a UNESCO World Heritage site, as well as a day to explore the historical context of Berlin, by visiting the Reichstag and Checkpoint Charlie.

Our program is organized in collaboration with Mr. Peter Carman, President of Paris American Academy. Students will be housed within walking distance of Paris American Academy in Paris and centrally-located hotels in Berlin. Students should budget additional funds for at least one meal a day in Paris and Berlin.

- INT 370.001 Interior Design Study Abroad
with Professor Gigi Szeklinski
Students will explore classical and modern architecture and interior design while experiencing French & German cultures.

Program Cost: $5,600

Tuition: Included as part of the regular Spring 2024 semester for full-time Mount Mary students.

Part-time students pay by credit hour and full-time students pay by credit hour for any overload credits.

Opportunities to explore furniture & decorative arts at the Louvre.

Students will have a chance to learn more about the Bauhaus architectural style with a day-trip to Dessau and visits to the Bauhaus Archive in Berlin.
